Reasons for Recommendations

1. The Council has a duty to review political balance on an annual basis and when there is a change in membership of political groups.
2. The Council has a duty, so far as reasonably practicable, to allocate committee seats to the political groups in line with the principles set out in Section 15(5) of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

1. The rules determining the calculation of political balance and the allocation of seats on committees are set out in Sections 15 and 16 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 and the Local Government (Committees and Political Groups) Regulations 1990.
2. Following a change in the membership of political groups the Council is required to review the political balance and determine the allocation of committee seats to each political group in-line with the principles set out in Section 15(5) of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.
3. Seats must be allocated to give effect to the following principles:
  - a. Not all seats on a committee should be allocated to the same political group;
  - b. a political group with an overall council majority (if there is one) should get a majority of the seats on each committee;
  - c. subject to (a) and (b), the total number of seats allocated to a group on all of the council's committees added together should be in proportion to that group's strength on the council; and
  - d. subject to (a), (b) and (c), the number of seats allocated to a group on each of the committees should also be in proportion to that group's strength on the council.
4. The Council must give effect to the principles above so far as reasonably practicable. To be formally constituted a political group must have at least two members.
5. The Council currently has ten committees which require a proportional allocation of seats to the political groups, as below.
